Omaha -- The Working Families Party today announced its endorsement of Kara Eastman for Congress in Nebraska's Second District for the Democratic Primary on May 15th, 2018.

Working Families Party spokesman Joe Dinkin said "Kara Eastman is the real deal. We can trust that she'll always put the needs of working families ahead of the demands of powerful donors. Kara is fighting for decent jobs, high quality education for every child, and great healthcare for every family. That's what we need right now, and that's why we need Kara Eastman."

The Working Families Party will mobilize its grassroots supporter base to volunteer for Kara Eastman in advance of the election. The Working Families Party endorsement is a "seal of approval" for progressive voters.

Kara Eastman released this statement in response:

"This endorsement is personally important to me because I have spent the last 13 years in Omaha fighting to improve the lives of working families through my work at Omaha Healthy Kids Alliance. Working families need a representative who understands the importance of investing in public education, green and healthy homes, quality healthcare and policies that support them."

The Working Families Party is a grassroots progressive political organization that fights for economic, racial and social justice. WFP believes our nation must serve the many, not the few. WFP recruits, trains and elects the the next generation of progressive leaders to office -- and then works with those leaders to win meaningful policy changes that make a difference in the lives of working families. In 2017, the Working Families Party backed 1036 candidates across 23 states, and won in nearly 2/3rds of its races.

Kara is the President and CEO of Omaha Healthy Kids Alliance and the Vice-Chair of the Board of Governors of Metropolitan Community College. She is the only life-long Democrat running for Congress in Nebraska's Second District.
